On December 9, 2025, the Minister of Economy announced a permanent reduction in export taxes on major agricultural commodities and by-products. To date, this reduction has not been published in the Official Argentine Bulletin, but it is expected to be soon.

The announcement establishes the following export tax modifications:

Commodity	Previously	Now
Soybeans: from	26%	24%
Soybean By-products	24.5%	22.5%
Wheat	9.5%	7.5%
Barley	9.5%	7.5%
Corn	9.5%	8.5%
Sorghum	9.5%	8.5%
Sunflower	5.5%	4.5%

The reduction is expected to have a positive effect on prices received by farmers, but with a varying degree of impact depending on the commodity. Delivering on a campaign pledge to make Argentina’s main export sector more competitive, this is the second permanent export tax reduction the Milei administration has implemented this year (in early 2025, export taxes on soybeans, soybean by-products, and grains were at 33%, 31%, and 12%, respectively).
